

Cookies

This web site uses cookies (small text files exchanged between our site and your computer) to store some items of information. For example, cookies are used to contribute usage information to our Google Analytics account, to help us improve our site.

The use of cookies is not in itself a security issue, but cookies do raise concerns among some people about privacy (here's a good summary of the situation). We do not use cookies to store information about passwords or credit card numbers or the like, nor do we carry third-party advertising. If you wish to block cookies sent to you from our site you can do so from within your web browser: see your browser's Help menu for information on how to do this or refer to www.AboutCookies.org, and look on your computer for cookies that contain the name glos.ac.uk. If you want to you can block cookies from other sites but allow through cookies from us (allow them from the glos.ac.uk domain).

It is also possible to block only the cookies used specifically for gathering usage information.

If you do choose to block all cookies from us, please be aware that you will not be able to use the print credit system.